5. But he who is only another form of the god of strength (Hanuman) said in this connection that he (Vibhishana) certainly deserved to be accepted (for the reasons) that he had sought refuge, was greatly devoted to the feet of Rama, and had come here desirous of enjoying the kingdom (of Lanka), knowing for certain the quick destruction of the Rakshasa (Ravana).

6 - 7. On Hanuman speaking thus, the Lord of the Devas accepting his (Hanuman's) word just as he had done before for the sake of Sugreeva said: "I shall certainly accept him who has fallen at my feet. This is always my vow. All the hordes of Devas along with Daityas and mortal beings, even though joined together, and headed by Brahma and others, are not capable of moving even my finger. I have no fear from this Rakshasa. And besides, I know him well to be of guileless nature.

8 - 9. Having said so, He (Rama) then made him (Vibhishana) one of his own men and anointed him in the kingdom (of Ravana). Being of unlimited natural strength, He (Rama) treated that enemy of all the good people like straw and gave (the kingdom of) Lanka to the younger brother of the Rakshasa king, and blessed him with longevity until the Kalpa (day) of Brahma, along with the sovereignty of the Rakshasa kingdom all the while, and attainment of His world at the end of that time.

Seeing that the ocean-god had not come to him even after three nights, he became angry and directed his eyes red at the extremities towards the ocean.

10. The ocean, killed by the side glance of the Supreme Lord flaming with rage, became dried up in a moment along with the demons and other creatures and he (ocean god), assuming his form (of Varuna) and carrying on his head valuable presents, fell at the feet of Rama and said thus:

11. "Oh thou great Being, we of dense intelligence cannot understand Thee who art unaffected and who art the primeval cause, and the Supreme Lord of the universe. Thou created the groups of Devas through Satva, the human beings through Rajas, and the herds of demons through the third quality (Tamas) and such creation proceeds in all ages.

Note :—Though the Devas have their origin in Satvaguna, still occasionally owing to the presence of Asuras in them they are affected by Tamasic spirit. To show this, the word satvataha is used. (Sri Vadiraja).

12. Go as you please (to Lanka), Oh! Warrior kill that son of Visravas who harasses the three worlds, obtain your wife, and build here, for the spreading of your fame, a bridge on reaching which kings set out for conquest will sing (your praise).

Note—The term avameha which literally means “thrown out like faeces”, points to a tyrant like Ravana being an unworthy son of the great sage Visravas. (Sri Vadiraja).

Formerly the king of the Devas (Indra) was captured by me. Why do you now grieve on account of the son of a human king." Having thus addressed, he set up sacrificial fire and, having worshipped Siva, mounted his chariot.

Thus told by him, Raghava replied: "It is not proper for you to fling the Asthra when he has become invisible through fear. If you are not able to bear his missiles, then I shall by a single simple arrow soon kill him, though he is invisible by hiding himself whether in (the nethermost region of) Rasathala or (in the highest region of) Satyaloka.”

Note—This incident is referred to in Moola Ramayana. While Sri Rama simply took an arrow, Indrajit began to run out of fear. On account of his thus terrifying his enemies, the Devas gave the appellation of Vibheeshana (i.e., one who terrifies other) to Sri Rama. Rama, unwilling to use the arrow against a fleeing opponent, and at the same time knowing it to be unfailing in its effect, sancified it with Vignana manthra and turned it to his own army, only so as to cause no injury but to wake it up from the stupor caused by the Mohana Asthra of Indrajit. 212—217. Then the progenitor of the universe with folded hands praised Him who is his own father and who delights in His own auspicious attributes (thus): “ Victory, victory to Thee, Oh, the unconquered One! the Creator of the universe! We bow to Thee who protect Thy refugees.

Thou alone art the Supreme Lord, Oh the praise worthy one! there is no beginning or end to Thee, either on account of time or space; Thy attributes are indeed countless, and each one of them also devoid of beginning or end is immense.

There is no manifestation for the first time or obscurity of any of Thy attributes at any time either from Thy self or from others. Thou alone art the Primeval Person, supreme, and independent. Myself and those others headed by Siva are Thy servants.

Just as sparks of fire, blasts of wind, rays of the Sun, waters of rivers, come and go eternally, so also are beings like myself, Siva, and such others (come in at the creation and go out at the destruction of the world.) All of us, those who have been released, and those who are still in bondage (of samsara), Oh Supreme Lord! are always only under Thy control.

Though all of us remain always uttering loudly the multitudes of Thy attributes, we have not reached their end.

Oh Lord! to Thee of such attributes, is the killing of this Rakshasa, or the protection of all the Devas, in any way wonderful? Though no doubt both these deeds are impossible of accomplishment by others, but still our salutations must go to Thee who hast done both these deeds, impossible of accomplishment by others.”

Note.—In respect of God there is no manifestation of attributes like the gradual development of capacity from infancy, nor their natural obscurity through old age. (Sri Vadiraja).
